

Function Leader Development Experience

The world has been disrupted in profound ways. So too have the expectations for what it takes to lead effectively in a post-pandemic world.

“I loved the focus on innovation and strategic thinking. In addition, I learned about my own leadership style, how to delegate better, and how to capitalize on my team to better execute strategy.”

Corey Walther, COO & Chief Compliance Officer, Allianz Life

That is why MDA Leadership is pleased to offer a unique, transformational Function Leader Development Experience (FLDE). This innovative 3-month development journey enables busy function leaders to accelerate their business impact, improve their leadership effectiveness, and enhance their resilience and well-being as they navigate the “new normal.”

Why Attend FLDE?

Called the “linchpin” of organizations, function leaders have arguably the greatest impact on your business performance. A future of disruptions and uncertainty puts a premium on organizational capabilities to rapidly learn, pivot, and execute with agility. Function leaders are the “critical middle” who exercise these capabilities, serving as executors and reshapers of strategy in real time, vital talent developers, change leaders, internal influencers, and results drivers. As your function leaders succeed, so too does your organization. Their development represents your best investment.

The criticality of function leadership to any high-performing organization led MDA to create FLDE based on our original research into the factors most predictive of excellence in a function leader role. The career path of the function leader leads increasingly to the senior leadership table, with positions like CMO, CFO, and CHRO. Function leader development is an investment in those who play a central role in the current success of the business and will play an increasingly more critical role in its future success.

Function Leader Development Experience

MDA's learning design ensures an exceptionally engaged and energizing experience that optimizes learning. The design includes carefully sequenced, multimodal activation experiences, simulations, small and large group discussions, on- and offline refreshers, and networking events with cross-organizational peer leaders.

Participation in this intensive and immersive program enables leaders to practice the leadership capabilities they must increasingly master to lead in the future. MDA has specifically designed this development experience to emphasize:

Today's organizational disruptions

A contextualized program to equip function leaders with the understanding and experience to engage in vital conversations and successfully lead through significant organizational disruptions. An emphasis on strategic thinking, change leadership, building resilience and developing the self-wisdom to become a more collaborative, inclusive, and human-centered leader.

Experiential learning

The "E" for experience in FLDE is emphasized more than ever, taking participants from initial assessments to cohort learning sessions and applications to one-on-one coaching to become better leaders in their organizations.

National peer connections

An unprecedented opportunity for participants to learn with and from other function leaders, and make individual and network connections to last a lifetime. MDA creates data-informed growth groups, matching participants with the right peers to maximize learning and growth.

Multiple modalities

Based on the latest neuroscience research, this developmental experience unfolds over time with coaching, digital platform sharing, microlearning, and in-person sessions for deep social learning. Participant's stakeholders support core learning.

Who Should Attend FLDE?

Someone who is serving as a function leader—a director, executive director, vice president, or senior vice president—and who is:

- Assuming an expanding role or in consideration for a more strategic leadership role
- In a leadership role, but wants to become a stronger enterprise leader
- Virtually leading a distributed workforce and wrestling with today's most pressing leadership demands
- Leading an operations, manufacturing, marketing, sales, finance or human resources function, or a business unit, geographic region, product group or customer segment

Targeting the development of your function leaders is one of the smartest investments an organization can make to boost performance.

When confronted with new and challenging leadership disruptions, it's normal for any leader to suddenly feel stressed and isolated. This cohort-based development experience is specifically designed to provide all participants with the confidence, connection, and collaborative support they need to lead more effectively as function leaders.
